San Beda, law profs' dispute reaches SC

By JAMES L. SAGUN

THE SUPREME COURT has been asked to resolve a dispute between San Beda College of Law and the Philippine Bar Association over the latter's refusal to accept graduates of the college.

San Beda, which has been a member of the Philippine Bar Association since 1967, has been asked to pay a fine of P100,000 for failing to comply with the association's rules on the admission of graduates.

The association's rules require that graduates of law schools must have completed a certain number of credit hours in law subjects before they can be admitted to the bar.

San Beda, however, claims that its graduates have completed the required credit hours and are eligible for admission.

The dispute arose when San Beda graduates were refused admission to the bar by the Philippine Bar Association. San Beda then filed a motion for summary judgment with the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court has now asked the parties to submit evidence and arguments on the dispute. The case is expected to be heard by the full court.

The case is significant because it involves the right of graduates of law schools to be admitted to the bar.

The Philippine Bar Association, which is the national organization of lawyers, has a long history of regulating the admission of graduates to the bar.

San Beda, on the other hand, claims that its graduates have completed the required credit hours and are eligible for admission.

The Supreme Court has now asked the parties to submit evidence and arguments on the dispute.

Record number of grads takes bar

By JAMES L. SAGUN

A RECORD NUMBER OF graduates of law schools took the Philippine Bar Examination in 1997, according to the Philippine Bar Association.

The association reported that more than 10,000 graduates took the exam, a record for the past several years.

The increase in the number of graduates is a result of the growing number of law schools in the Philippines.

Abstract. This paper presents the results of a study on the effects of a training program on the performance of a group of students. The study was conducted over a period of 12 weeks, and the results were compared to a control group. The findings indicate that the training program had a significant positive effect on the students' performance, particularly in the areas of problem-solving and critical thinking. The results also suggest that the training program was more effective for students who had a higher level of prior knowledge and experience. The implications of these findings for future research and practice are discussed.

By Dave Karger

Over the last 100 years, the city of Rome has been the setting for some of the most important works of art and literature in the Western world. Now, the city is the setting for a new television series, Rome, which will air on HBO in 2005. The series will follow the lives of two young men, Lucius and Tiberius, who are caught in the middle of a power struggle between the two main families of the city, the Julians and the Claudians.

Rome is a historical drama that will take viewers back to the city of Rome in the 1st century BC. The series will be set during the time of the Roman Republic, when the city was at the height of its power. The series will follow the lives of two young men, Lucius and Tiberius, who are caught in the middle of a power struggle between the two main families of the city, the Julians and the Claudians.
